Whether it’s an Italian teacher and Buddhist revolutionizing education in India, a fiery transformational leader helping kids and teens discover their passions and change their destinies, an American mom empowering girls and women in Uganda, an international yoga instructor teaching yoga from a wheelchair, or a remarkable young professor bringing online education to earthquake-ravaged Haiti, all of these change-makers share practices and principles that enable them to align their passion and purpose to bring their vision to fruition. They are not only change-makers, they are world-changers.

Learn how you too can apply these practices to inspire change in your world or community. You don’t have to go global to be noble. In many cases, these leaders started out where you might be—as teachers, journalists, entrepreneurs, corporate executives, and moms—but with a dream to do something “bigger.” With deep commitment and extraordinary vision they've created programs and organizations that are not only transforming the world and the lives of thousands, but also their own lives.
