Life in a Nazi Concentration Camp (The Way People Live) Anne Grenn Saldinger

Life in a Nazi concentration camp was far worse than anything the prisoners had imagined or experienced. Thousands of people were killed upon arrival at death camps, countless others were worked to death, but some prisoners managed to survive. What was life like for those who spent up to five years struggling to stay alive in a camp? Encountering unbearable conditions, severe punishment, and relentless oppression, each day became a struggle to survive.
